

Cedars of Lebanon State Park

is the home of 19 rare and endemic species of wildflowers that are found only in the Cedar Glade environment. Over 1000 acres in size, Cedars of Lebanon is used for various active and passive intensive recreational activities by the visiting public.

Historical significance

Named for the dense Cedar Forest that existed in the Biblical lands of Lebanon, Cedars of Lebanon State Park and State Forest is home to the largest remaining stand of Red Cedars in the United States. Although not true cedars, these trees, which are Junipers, are a close cousin. In the mid 1930's, lands were purchased and combined into a single area for the purpose of replanting the "Red Cedars" which had been logged out for use in the pencil industry.
